Enago's Special Promotion

FTM researchers can avail themselves of free Rejection Shield after Substantive Editing.

Under Rejection Shield, Enago provides the following benefits:

- Edit your responses to reviewer comments.
- Edit the revisions and additional content to address reviewer comments, and ensure all issues are adequately addressed.
- Prepare a fresh cover letter that highlights the improvements you have made.
- Format the manuscript according to a new target journal, if required.

Note: Enago covers up to 30% additional text and 20% revised text, which satisfies 99% of journals' revision requests.

This promotion is until 16 December 2021 only

Enago's Special Promotion

Rejection Shield

Special Offer for Faculty of Tropical Medicine, Mahidol University

Free under Substantive Editing

Available with Substantive Editing on university.enago.com/mahidol-university/

Rejection Shield safeguards you from journal rejection. Our experienced editors will help you respond to peer-reviewer comments and prepare your manuscript for resubmission. If you wish to submit your paper to a different journal, we will format it according to the new journal requirements and prepare a fresh cover letter.

What we do:

- Edit your responses to reviewer comments.
- Edit the revisions and additional content to address reviewer comments, and ensure all issues are adequately addressed.
- Prepare a fresh cover letter that highlights the improvements you have made.
- Format the manuscript according to a new target journal, if required.

Author First, Quality First

* We cover 30% additions and 20% revisions, which is more than sufficient to satisfy 99% journal revision demands.

Edanz vs Enago: Pros and Cons

EDANZ

Pros

- Faster delivery
- Preferred by some authors
- Pricing can be flexible

Cons

- More expensive
- Lengthy order process

ENAGO

Pros

- Has more affordable service like Copyediting
- Flexible pricing
- A lot of promotions lately

Cons

- Longer delivery, 5 days not including weekend
- Inconsistencies with the quality of editing

Edanz or Enago: Which one should I use?

If your manuscript does not exceed 5,000 words, and you need fast editing (deadline is near) and premium quality editing, choose Edanz.

If your manuscript has around 5,001-7,000 words, you are not in a hurry, do not want to pay excess fees, choose Enago Copyediting.

If your manuscript has been reviewed by the journal and just needs language proofreading, choose Enago Copyediting.

If your manuscript has less than 5,000 words, need premium quality editing, you are not in a hurry, and want to get Rejection shield service, choose Enago Substantive Editing.

Tips to make the most out of your 350 USD budget

- Remove references, or highlight them to exclude them from quotation
- If it's still too long, cut tables and figures, and other parts that do not need editing (eg. quotations, author contributions, etc.)
- If it's STILL too long, cut the authors list and affiliations. But please send this to us separately for records and approval purposes.
- Remember: For the 350 USD budget, 5,000 words is the maximum word count to avail premium editing (Edanz or Enago)
- 7,0000 words is the maximum for Copyediting
